Lonely Planet : Just POINT! (Lonely Planet) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Just POINT! (Lonely Planet):

I guess I would suggest they be made of a Tyvec-Like or nylon or some other plastic material so they could be much thinner and therefore easier to pocket. Otherwise, I feel these are great for international travel, especially if you are caught in an emergency. Even though we Americans think everyone speaks English or SHOULD (kind 'a arrogant and ignorant don't-cha think?), and many of us have another tongue or two in our heads, the vocabulary might have faded or short-circuited when tired or facing an urgent need. A thinner material would also make it easier to print my custom labels and attach--or use permanent markers--to add my custom needs on the blank page you should add at the end. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Not what I was looking for. By Sock Hawk This is a good product, well made, well thought out but not what I was looking for. I was trying to find a single sheet plastic card that folded into thirds printed on both sides. This is a heavy packet with 20 to 30 pages printed in color front and back, well made but too bulky to just carry around. Maybe I'll grow to like it but I much prefer the single page that just has the basics (e.g. bathroom, money exchange, bus station, hospital, police etc.). 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Only works if interest align with illustrations By Kristie It is a little disappointing in the icons chosen to interpret. I was looking for some more nature oriented or activity oriented things that were a little lower key than soccer games and drinking. Lonely Planet usually does give good info on such topics so I expected the same from their "Just Point"

Travel comfort woes begone. Never again be lost for words. Overcome any language barrier, wherever you travel. With Just Point! in your daypack, you'll be able to communicate all essential messages - and maybe a few non-essential ones, too! This handy-sized deck of 40+ full-colour cards with more than 500 entertaining icons on food and drink, accommodation, transport, fashion and sightseeing, all held together with a screw for easy flicking, is a guaranteed conversation starter! When you're craving that skinny double-shot cappuccino with extra froth, Lonely Planet provides the answer in a language any barista will understand. Whether it's the yoga, pilates or tai chi class you're looking for, just point to the icon to get your point across. This is the perfect gift for the discerning traveller. These icons will make communicating with locals a breeze - and won't fail to raise a smile either with their depictions of the amusing situations often encountered when exploring places far from home. Just point to express: your dietary restrictions how you like your steak cooked how spicy you'd like your curry what burger toppings you'd like that you're in a rush to get the bill that you're looking for the funicular that there's a fly in your soup what ice-cream topping you require your preferred garnishes for the perfect martini whether you want an espresso, a macchiato or a cappuccino whether you need a twin or a double room whether you have a hairdryer in your room that you've got the dreaded bed bugs in your hotel room that you're looking for the cathedral that romantic room-service options are required which all-important beauty treatment you need how you'd like your beard trimmed if your rental car has a flat tyre which direction to take if you're lost and more!
