This fascinating collection of photographs brings to life a hundred years of Kennebunk's rich history and in particular the hustle and bustle of Main Street between 1869 and 1970.

About the Author Local resident and historian Stephen Burr has brought together over two hundred images which show us how much, and also how little, has changed in Kennebunk over the last century. The photographs are taken from the collection of the late Kenneth Joy, and were donated upon his death to the Kennebunk Free Library Association. The images many rare and previously unpublished-lead us on a vivid journey into our past and give us an intimate glimpse of the people, places, and events which have defined Kennebunk over the decades.
