Just found my original copy and am in the process of reading it through, enjoying every page. This is a bit biased because I used to cave and feature several times in the book (Paul Everett) but even so I think it gives a realistic insight into the science, sport or adventure which is caving for the non caver. Every event which Dave describes (from having his mars bars constantly stolen to his solo epics) is not exaggerated and I witnessed several others. It reads easily and invites us to glimpse the wild times of extreme caving in the early 70's

David Yeandle started caving in Somerset at the age of sixteen. He quickly became addicted to this adventurous sport. As soon as he could he moved to Leeds so as to be well placed to explore the more extensive cave systems of northern England. He was given the nickname Pooh by a Leeds University caver called Minitrog. This book is a light-hearted and amusing look at the eccentric world of caving. The author is also a keen traveller and has visited many remote places in Asia and Australia. After years of wandering he ended up working in oil exploration and one of his most interesting assignments was being part of the fire-fighting operations in Kuwait after the Gulf War.
