Asar Eppel : The Grassy Street (New Russian Writing) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Grassy Street (New Russian Writing):

3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Some of the finest Russian short stories of this century By A Customer From the first page one senses that this is a writer who has created a unique world, and who tells of it in a unique voice. The stories are beautifully translated - every sentence is alive. Eppel was born in 1935 and worked most of his life as a translator of Polish literature. These stories were written 1979-80, and were first published in Russia only a few years ago. They chronicle the life of a down-at-heel Moscow suburb in the 1940's. The subject matter is often sordid, but Eppel writes with tenderness, humour and vitality.

"As the narrative delivers glimpses of human life in bite-size chunks, [Asar] Eppel's extraordinary compassion and humor is revealed, combined with his Jewish sense of history and merciless insight into people's true natures." Good Book Guide "Unsentimental but humane, his spare realism penetrates daily life." The New York Times Book Review

"How is it possible that the work of this brilliant, cultivated writer with his noble sense of humor and eternal Jewish anguish, with his all embracing compassion for people combined with his merciless insight into their true nature, was unknown? In my opinion, Asar Eppel is the best Russian writer today." --Ludmilla Pertrushevskaya, author of The Time: Night
